Siouxland artist Ray Holbrook created this nostalgic depiction of Heelan for members of our Heelan family. A native of Sioux City, he has worked in original art and commercial art for over 35 years.

Ray is also the designer of our BHCS logo. In creating our Catholic school system logo over 20 years ago he updated the 1949 shield design created by Sr. De Lourdes and added an official font. We have proudly used it for our schools ever since.

How Your Gift to the Monsignor Lafferty Tuition Foundation Helps Kids

What does the Lafferty Foundation do for students?

It raises money to help fund tuition assistance grants for children attending our Catholic schools.

What are the excellent tax benefits I can enjoy?

You will receive a 65% Iowa tax credit and a federal tax deduction on the full gift amount. If you are in the 25% tax bracket and donate $1,000, $650 goes to pay Iowa taxes you owe and up to $250 might be taken off as a federal tax deduction. You pay just $100 out of pocket, yet your gift gives us a $1,000 benefit. Please see your tax advisor, every situation is different.

How many Heelan System students benefit?

Nearly 500 lower income students, grades K-12, receive tuition grants from the $600,000 raised in 2018. Having Lafferty support releases funds from the school budget to help hundreds of middle income students receive tuition help to attend our Catholic schools. Grants help Heelan athletes and musicians, students who learn in our classrooms and kids on every school playground.

Heelan ACT Results Hit 24

A remarkable 20 percent of 2020 class members have scored a 30 or higher on their ACT college exams -- a record for Heelan. The ACT Test results for the Heelan class of 2018 were 24 -- a 1.2 point bump from the previous year. Most significantly, while Iowa and National scores decreased in every section from the previous year, Heelan students showed improvement in every area. Here is the data in simple form:

- English: Heelan 23.9, Iowa 21.0, National 20.2
- Reading: Heelan 24.6, Iowa 22.5, National 21.3
- Science: Heelan 24.1, Iowa 22.0, National 20.7

Composite: Heelan 24.0, Iowa 21.8, National 20.8

Following these results junior Elizabeth Meyer scored a perfect 36 on her test in early 2019.

“While our numbers consistently exceed state and national tests, we constantly strive to look at ways to enhance our educational product,” says Bob Geary, director of guidance.

Happy Anniversary Sr. Colane

Sister Colane Recker, Heelan’s librarian, celebrated her 60th jubilee in spring -- her anniversary of being received into the Order of Saint Francis in Dubuque.

Heelan teachers celebrated with a standing ovation and cake for all! Sr. Colane taught and then earned a master’s in library science and came to Heelan 18 years ago.

Says Sr. Colane, “I love the kids and the Heelan faculty. “They’ll never know how great they are!”

New Mattress Anyone?

Heelan grads over the years have sold candy bars, decals, magazines, yearbook ads, coupon cards, cookie dough and more to raise funds for a cause.

Well here’s a new one -- a Mattress Sale!

Last November Heelan’s Duffy Hall Commons was transformed into a mattress showroom, and 30 mattresses were sold to raise $6,065 for Heelan’s band and vocal music programs. Box springs, massage chairs, pillows, bed frames and sheet sets were sold, too.

The brands include Simmons, Beautyrest, Intellibed and more. A Heelan grad in Texas bought a mattress in her city and Heelan received the credit.

Custom Fundraising Solutions has 90 locations and works with 2,800 schools to raise over $33 Million.

The next mattress sale is Nov. 23 but you can order now. Visit bit.ly/beds4heelan.

Heelan Band Marches with New PA System Sound

In fall 2018 Heelan’s Marching Band showcased the choreographed performance “Pirates Revenge” with sound enhanced by a new outdoor PA system funded by the Gilchrist Foundation. The $12,600 in sound equipment included speakers, wireless microphones, a 16 Channel Digital Mixer, a power amplifier and more.

“We are deeply grateful to the Gilchrist Foundation,” says James Kunz, band director. “The new equipment made a big difference in the quality of sound in our programs.”

In addition to flag twirlers and marching musicians the band featured a 24 ft long pirate ship that “burned” at the end of the program. Heelan’s Marching Band not only received rave reviews from football fans for its program, it earned a top No. 1 rating in the state for the quality of its music performance.

The Gilchrist Foundation also funded $75,800 for staging platforms, a 52 ft. wide roll up curtain and motorized lighting bar to be used in the new Heelan gym for show choir competition and other events.
Heelan Artists Create Outdoor Mural

Heelan advanced art students painted an outdoor masterpiece now viewed by thousands of cars every month at a major intersection west of downtown.

A concrete wall near the intersection of Wesley Parkway and Third Street provided the canvas for the 11-by-9 mural. Some 15 students worked on the mural last October from 9 a.m. till 7 p.m. in chilly weather. In addition to “Welcome” they painted images inside the outlined words “Sioux City” along with local high school mascots.

The public art was requested by Leadership Sioux City which helped decide the design. The Heelan students were guided by art teacher Laurie Dougherty, ’80, a veteran of mural works.

“It’s so great, so great that they designed this,” Dougherty said. “The students gave up their day to paint, because they have to make up their classes. They’re great kids, talented kids and willing to share their gifts with the world.”

Art student Elizabeth Meyer said students prepared for several weeks. “It’s cool all of our hard work is up at a major outdoor location. When you come into Sioux City (from 3rd street or the bridge) you see it.”

2018-2019 Student Achievements

Noah Roerig, Foster Johnson, Christopher Krogh, Jaiden Uttech and Thomas Pyles are Iowa Quiz Bowl Champions in the small school division for Iowa. Heelan has won first place in three out of the past several years. On a sad note, moderator Ken Strouse, Heelan chemistry teacher, has retired and moved to Chicago. Kudos to Strouse’s leadership.

Lauren Sobaski, Eric Lohr, Truman Osborn, Christopher Krogh, Tanner Summerville, Mara Aesoph, Foster Johnson, Kate Gill, Adi Bogenrief and Sarah Beumler were the top vocal students for All state -- the highest achievement that can honor vocal music students. Andi Espina was an alternate, Asia Keane was selected for the Opus Honor Choir and Sara-Marie Jabre made all state orchestra. The annual Iowa All-State Festival is held every November.

Kennedy Bork, Emily Daffer, Collin Jackson, and Jenna Rethman were selected to display their exhibit for History Day at state. Their project, “Atomic Bomb: Scientific Triumph or Human Tragedy,” was guided by social studies teacher Nan Kiel.

Elizabeth Albenesius danced in the lead role of “Cinderella” in March at Klinger Neal Theatre at Morningside College. Other Crusaders in the Ballet Sioux production were: Olivia Granaaas, Alainna Joly, Jenna Rethman, Eric Lohr and Tanner Summerville.

Kate Namanny and Noah Roerig were named Heelan Rotary Students of the Month. Kate was Student Council President, on the Gold Honor Roll, and ranked in the top 10 of her class. Noah was named the “2018 Sioux City Area Male Youth Leader of the Year” and traveled to National Council on Youth Leadership Conference at Washington University in St. Louis. He was class salutatorian.

Isabel Martinez won the Essay Writing Contest for Tolerance Week 2019 in the high school division, which saw 164 entries, for her piece “I am a witness.”

Another State Poetry Champ

For the third time in four years a Heelan student was chosen to represent Iowa in the National Poetry Out Loud contest in Washington D.C. Junior Foster Johnson won $500 worth of poetry books for Heelan and competed in the national finals last April.

Top Award Honors Fr. Walsh

Fr. Patrick Walsh, retired president of Bishop Heelan Catholic Schools, received the prestigious Clergy Award at the Bishop’s Dinner for Catholic Schools this fall.

He was honored for devoting 43 years to Catholic education, including president positions at Fort Dodge St. Edmond before coming to the Heelan school system.

Tom Miklo, Saint Edmond Catholic School Director of Development was one of several who nominated Fr. Walsh for the award.

Fr. Walsh was “a leader that could inspire and involve others, for indeed it does take an entire village to raise a child,” said Miklo. “Father Walsh was that leader for Saint Edmond and his efforts are paying dividends still today.”

As Heelan president, Fr. Walsh launched the Pride Campaign to build the new Heelan, opened Kiddie Crusader preschools and renamed our Catholic school system after Bishop Heelan.

“What he accomplished with the new Heelan High School, nurturing a dream to complete realization, is truly remarkable!” said Dennis Duffy, ’68 in his nomination.

“Fr. Walsh worked night and day developing plans for our school,” added Pat Sitzman, longtime Heelan teacher. “He was instrumental in developing our teaching staff into solid Christian leaders, and he remained our “pastor” of the Heelan chapel even after he retired.”

In addition to his award, Fr. Walsh celebrated the 50th anniversary of his ordination in June. Fr. Walsh retired in summer 2012 after nine years as Heelan president. He continues today attending Heelan games and events, playing in an Irish band and attending Rotary Club.

Kruise Joins Heelan Fundraising Staff

Cory Kruse ’11 and former Sacred Heart School teacher, is new director of annual giving.

He is working with alumni, businesses and other community supporters to boost the Spirit of Heelan Annual Fund and will assist the BHCS advancement team on the Heelan Gold Club, Heelan Auction and alumni communications.

Kruse joins Tom Betz, vice president of advancement; Janet Flanagan, director of special gifts; Sue Ferris, data base manager and Tom Rice, director of campaigns.

Kruse most recently served as the marketing communication specialist at Sterling Computers. He previously taught 6th-8th grade language arts at Sacred Heart School from 2015 to 2017 and helped coach varsity football, middle school track and summer strength and conditioning.

Kruse is the son of Renee and Joe Kruse ’82 and grandson of grads Joe and Marlene Kruse. He earned a bachelor’s degree from the University of Nebraska – Lincoln where he majored in secondary English and elementary education.

Porsch Supports Athletic Office

“The positive Christ-centered environment has helped shape me into the person I am today.”

Alicia earned a bachelor’s degree in sociology and criminal justice from Creighton University and has earned credits for a teaching certificate at Buena Vista University. She and her husband, Eric, have three children.

First Aid for Mental Health

Students experiencing mental health stress at Heelan will receive faster more comprehensive help in a new youth mental health program. Heelan Counselor and former social worker Stacia Barker ’00, and others are now certified and training teachers, coaches and others in regular contact with students.

More students face challenges today: parents divorcing, financial problems, peer pressures, single parent family stresses, isolation, depression and more, Barker says.

“Many young people with mental health challenges can be helped with earlier identification, early support and intervention,” she says. We’re embracing this initiative to serve all of our students holistically; mind, body, spirit. We want to nurture and care for all students and provide yet another layer of support to our families.”
Dr. John Flanery, a member of the high school faculty and administration advancement staff, was named president of Bishop Heelan Catholic Schools last February (BHCS.) Flanery previously taught at Heelan from 1996 to 2004. A music education graduate from Briar Cliff University, he left to earn a doctorate in musical arts and a master’s degree in choral conducting from the University of Kentucky. He returned in 2017 to join Heelan’s music faculty and work with enrollment and advancement. Before returning to Heelan, Flanery served as the director of choral activities at New Mexico State University and associate choral director at the University of Southern Mississippi.

Flanery and his wife, Juliane ’97 -- a theology teacher at Heelan and daughter of Jim ’66 and Jameley (Rizk) Levich ’65 -- have five children. He succeeded Timm Funk who served as interim leader following the retirement of Jim Tschann.

How did you end up at Briar Cliff for college? My oldest sister was a two-sport athlete in basketball and golf at Briar Cliff, so it was always on my radar along with Creighton. I considered music, pre-law or history and knew Briar Cliff was my choice for music. I played golf there, too, which I really enjoyed.

What about Heelan has appealed to you? After graduating from Briar Cliff, I taught for one year in Mount Ayr, Iowa, but it was quite remote. When the Heelan choir position opened my mentors at Briar Cliff encouraged me to apply. The choir program at the time enjoyed lots of momentum so it was the perfect match for me. I grew up in Guthrie Center, Iowa which didn’t have a Catholic school, so Heelan’s faith setting had special appeal.

With choral music as your background, did you ever dream of being School System President? No. Never. I did think my wife and I would come back to Sioux City though. This leadership position spoke to me. A choir director brings people together from various backgrounds of ability, skill, and ideas and focuses them toward a single set of goals. I feel that my teaching and choir strengths are keys to success in this new role.

What do you enjoy most as President? I love working with people. Bringing people together with different opinions and trying to build consensus can be difficult. But if we slow down, discuss with a rational mind and compassionate heart, we can agree how to move forward. I love our families, our students, alumni, our faculty and staff. We have tremendous people in our schools, and it is an honor to work alongside them.

What’s your biggest challenge? Dealing with the short-term while also keeping our eye on the long term. In all situations it’s easy to just fix what needs work today. We are in a place as a system where we also need to know where we are going long-term. Finding that balance can be difficult.

What’s it like being married to a Heelan High teacher? With five children to raise and teach along with us both working full-time, life is a lot busier! Juliane is an outstanding educator and I am proud of her teaching.

What do your own children teach you? Patience! With five kids there is always one in need of a little more. We are so incredibly blessed with our children – indeed every day I am taught a little more about the definition of the word love.

Will you stay involved with music? I hope so. I plan to help at Heelan with all-state and show choir if they will have me. I also have the Celebration Choir at Blessed Sacrament and started the Missouri River Choral Society. I enjoy judging and doing honor choirs. Next summer I am traveling to Italy with singers to conduct with an Italian orchestra.

Have a favorite college team? We bleed blue at our house – the Kentucky Wildcats – since I did my graduate studies at the University of Kentucky. Everyone here is rooting for a Big 12 or Big 10 team, so we can fly under the radar.

Cheeseburgers or pizza? Pizza. Tony’s Pizza. It is pure Elysium.

The dream has come true! Heelan’s $3.7 million gym is ready to open to make our new Heelan high school complete. Just as the old Heelan Pit generated memories of a lifetime for alumni, the new gym space will help drive the heartbeat of Heelan and create new stories to be retold for generations to come.

A notable feature is the top-loading design which means people will enter at the top and descend steps to sit in the bleachers.

“It’s still a Pit, but a beautiful new one with air-conditioning, more space, extra seating, better visibility, state-of-the-art scoreboards, and better sound,” says Tom Betz, vice president of advancement. “The old Pit was loved by many but was one of the oldest in the state and deficient in many areas for athletes, coaches and fans.”

In addition to providing court space for practices, games and meets for basketball, volleyball and wrestling the new gym will host physical education classes; intramurals; sports camps; pep assemblies; annual show choir competitions; food assembly events for Honduras; special events and more.

Another key feature will be an indoor track looping the top of the gym.

“We’re excited to offer this new amenity to our Heelan family,” Betz says. “It will not only benefit students, but faculty and staff. We hope to welcome special alumni and supporters to use it as well, contributing to people’s overall health.”

Fans and athletes from the 25 area school districts that compete with Heelan will be delighted with improved parking, new sound system, locker rooms, concession stand and updated facilities, Betz adds. The bleachers will increase seating from 1,000 (including the stage) to 1600.

The new gymnasium represents the third construction phase of Heelan’s $32 million high school project. After years of fundraising, the $15 million fine arts section opened in 2014 and the $12.3 million academic classroom addition opened in 2018.

The PRIDE campaign has been widely successful, and funds are still being raised. Final words from Betz about the gym: “Thank you Crusaders for your unending support.”

Gym Features

- 1600 seats
- Air-conditioning
- 2 practice courts and a main court
- Walking/running track
- Athletic training room
- Locker rooms
- Coaches offices
- Video Scoreboard

Gym Built with Tilt-up Walls

In a unique change to construction, brick walls that were planned were replaced with concrete walls poured onsite and tilted up with a 500-ton crane.

The walls were literally placed within 3 winter days in January. Tilt-up walls, a product of LiteForm in South Sioux City, Neb., sped up construction, reduced costs and will ensure better efficiency for heating and cooling. Note the indoor track for walking and running.

Support Siouxland BigGive Oct. 1

Over 110 alumni, teachers, parents and friends contributed $19,000 to the purchase of a new video scoreboard for the new Heelan gym as part of the first annual Siouxland BigGive, a day of online giving last year. Heelan came in as No. 1 out of 102 local non-profits.

The project will be a rubberized track surface for the gym’s new walking/running track. Donate at SiouxlandBigGive.org. You are invited to come see the Heelan gym and/or donate on Oct. 1, 2019.
Show Choir Dads Add Behind the Scene Support
Reprinted in edited form courtesy Sioux City Journal
This article is dedicated to all the past dads (and moms) who have provided critical support to Heelan Show Choirs for over 30 years.

“So, what does a Duct Tape Dad do?”

“Well, pretty much everything. When Heelan’s show choir has an out-of-town engagement, the dads transport all of the gear -- costumes, risers, musical instruments -- in trailers to the performance site and back.

They quickly assemble -- and disassemble -- equipment within minutes. If something breaks, they fix it. If it can’t be fixed, well, that’s where duct tape comes in handy.

For the Crusader Classic, Malenosky and crew set up Heelan’s high school auditorium for middle school teams competing on Friday. Then, they’ll regroup while setting the “Pit,” for competing high school performers.

“I usually take Wednesday and Thursday off from work in order to get everything ready,” said Malenosky, whose daughter, Alycen, is a show choir member.

“Jeremy saw me at various school events and actively recruited me as a Duct Tape Dad nearly five years ago,” Van Holland said.

“You have to be continually recruiting new dads because kids are always graduating,” Malenosky said of the group, which also includes Fred Summerville, Bart Hollis and Krishna Bishwokarma in addition to dads above.

“We’ve taken needle and thread to a costume in a pinch,” Van Holland said. They are also needed when to scuffing up dress shoes. Um, what?

“Slippery shoes and risers don’t mix,” Malenosky said.

“We’re essentially in out-of-town roadies for a bunch of high school kids,” he said.

Still, Malenosky said he loves what he does. “We have the best of the house when the kids perform,” he said. “And we get to break up the scenery as soon as they’re done.”

Jeremy is the spouse of Kristen (Happe) Malenosky ’91, father of Heelan grad Zach, Alycen, a Heelan senior and Jacob, grade and son-in-law of Carol (Gerch) Happe ’66 and Chuck Happe ’67.

Strategic Plan Guides Schools

Board members, parents, faculty and staff helped craft a strategic plan for the next five years that will guide direction and decisions for the Heelan School System.

“We are grateful for the constructive input our school community has provided,” says John Flanery, president.

The plan builds on previous long-range initiatives that have guided the system since Sioux City Catholic schools were consolidated into one system 20 years ago. The new Bishop Heelan High School came out of an early long-range plan, an example of how a plan can make a difference for an organization.

The newly-adopted plan focuses on goals and initiatives in academics, Catholic Identity, athletics and activities, advancement and alumni, communications, enrollment, facilities, finance, parish relations and more. The final plan will be featured at BishopHeelan.org

Student achievement shines brightly at Bishop Heelan elementary schools as seen in the recent Iowa Assessment Scores for grades 3-11. The most recent tests show our students’ proficiency and growth in math, science and reading.

Reading measures comprehension and vocabulary, while math measures algebraic thinking, probability and more. The scores below show the percent proficient by grade of Bishop Heelan Catholic Schools, compared to AEA schools (including Sergeant Bluff and Hinton) and the State of Iowa.

Sioux City Catholic schools use Iowa Assessments, STAR reading and math computer adaptive assessments and more to monitor student learning, according to Kate Connealy, Sacred Heart School principal who chairs the BHCS multi-tiered system of support committee.

“We continually address student growth and progress,” says Connealy. “We use computer adaptive programs, interventions and enrichment to meet all of our students’ needs.”

Sacred Heart Creates New Playground

Sacred Heart School is developing a new play area with a playscape, basketball court and a soccer field.

Students have used a parking lot for many years, says Principal Kate Connealy. The surface causes numerous skinned knees and inhibits creative play. Funerals using the parking lot prevent children from playing outside at all.

Students and families have raised nearly $75,000 for the project and Lieber Construction is donating time and equipment to remove an unused hill to create the new play space.

Dual Language Academy Opens

A major new program -- A new Dual Language Academy - opened this fall in the CYO to teach preschool and kindergarten students in Spanish 90 percent of the day. The Dual Language program, taught by newly hired bilingual teachers, is offered in partnership with Boston College’s Two-Way Immersion Network for Catholic Schools. It will enroll students from the tri-state area.

Research shows that students who know two languages enjoy stronger academic success, can better focus and multitask, adjust better to changes, enjoy a more stimulating school experience and more opportunities in college and jobs.

Holy Cross Offers School for Age 3

Three-year-olds are now attending the “Children’s School” at Holy Cross School weekday mornings.

The new preschool with long-time teacher Julie Berenstein promotes learning with play activities. It expands Bishop Heelan Catholic Schools’ early childhood education. Holy Cross, Mater Dei and Sacred Heart have enrolled four-year-olds in their preschools for many years.
Impromptu paper snowball fight in the classroom? Yup. Learning “the floss”? Yup. Dodgeball tournaments? Yes! (And she loves it when her class wins!)

Diane Ralston had a lot of fun teaching at Holy Cross–Blessed Sacrament School, most of it in fourth grade. After teaching over 1,000 students over 40 years, she said “goodbye” to her classroom last May.

It was a job she loved.

“The kids want to learn new concepts and are willing to put in the work to achieve this,” she says. “They can work independently, but still need guidance. They are honest and open about themselves and really want to please teachers.”

And they tried to teach her, too.

“My kids this year said one of the funniest is trying to teach me ‘the floss,’” she says. “I just can’t seem to get the hang of it and we laughed whenever I tried.”

Another change she experienced is technology in the classroom.

“When I first came to Blessed Sacrament, there were no computers and no email. In the early ‘80s, one of our principals introduced us to a desktop Apple computer.”

Initially, students mainly used computers for games. Now, Chromebooks and other computer technology are an integral part of classroom instruction, research and assignments.

Today teachers also use Infinite Campus software which has computerized the grading system and communicates with parents. Ralston often posted classroom scenes on the Holy Cross Facebook page to give parents and grandparents a feel for special classroom activities.

“The Mass is an important part of my life,” Ralston says. “I taught my students to be involved by preparing them to cantor, read or be gift bearers at our weekly school Masses. We talked in religion that it is important to pray to God all the time.”

Over the years she appreciated her students praying for her and her disabled son, Jake, who lives in Sheldon at Village Northwest Unlimited.

“Jake has had many surgeries over the years,” she says. “It meant a lot to have everyone here at school pray for him.”

While education has become more complicated today a good change is the focus on “individualized instruction for children to help make sure we are reaching the kids at their level,” she says.

What advice does Ralston have for new teachers?

“Show the kids you love each of them,” she says.

Lettering and Crucifix Enhance Commons

Heelan grads stepped forward to enhance Duffy Hall Commons with gold lettering “Bishop Heelan Catholic High School” and a 5 ft tall crucifix. The additions convey the faith-based learning setting at Heelan at the entrance to the new academic classrooms.

The beautiful gold lettering was a gift of Frank ’50 and Mary Ann (Redmond) Audino ’55.

The Crucifix was donated by long-time English teacher Pat Sitzman and her husband Larry ’65, a deacon. The Crucifix, hand-carved in Italy was custom painted with Heelan navy blue and blessed in a student assembly. “The gifts from the two families represent the rich tradition of Heelan,” says Tom Betz of advancement.
would be a match to donate a portion of their livers, but all were over age 50 and considered too old.

When Canoles, 32, learned her aunt needed a transplant she didn’t hesitate to get tested and then learned she was a match.

“I sat down with my boss and I sat down with my husband and my parents and said, ‘I want to do this.’”

At Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha, Canoles underwent a battery of tests, lost weight and began working out.

After two days of recovery Peiffer and Canoles met up and walked the halls together, celebrating the successful transplant. After surgery, a donor’s liver regenerates back to full size, while the patient’s new liver also grows to a normal size.

What surprised her? “I remember thinking ‘Oh my gosh, this is hard. The pain in recovery wasn’t excruciating but I couldn’t sleep, sit or lay down,’” Canoles says. “But being away in the hospital from the family – my daughters, husband and parents – and then trying to heal was the hardest.”

Other family members in Omaha helped ease her recovery. She stayed at the home of Nancy (Duzik) Huber ’90, daughter of Don and Terry (Blair) Duzik ’65. Huber helped care for her for a week until Canoles returned home and took care of Peiffer longer.

“I had a ton of support from my family and my friends,” Canoles adds. “My new employer ‘Dunes Dental 4 Kids’ sent me flowers and they were checking on me, and I hadn’t even started working there yet.”

Did her faith and values play a part in Canoles’ decision to donate?

“One hundred percent!” Canoles says. “My husband and I have two children and have wanted another. I had some miscarriages, but tests didn’t show anything was wrong and we kept trying. When I didn’t get pregnant before the transplant in December, I think it was God telling me ‘this is what I need you to do.’

“In February my husband and I found out I was pregnant. I’m due in November. I feel like God planned this all out and told me what I needed to do.”

I love a hometown-kid-done-good story. Paul Buchheit ‘00, Bishop Heelan High School graduate makes it even better. While basking in the glow of a World Series title, he tips his cap to folks back home who helped him get there.

Chris Bork, Joe Malsam, Brendan Burchard, Chris Todden, Steve Eddie. And, his mom and dad, Kathy Stowick and the late Bob Buchheit, who battled brain cancer until his death in 2002.

Paul Buchheit, 36, serves as assistant trainer for the Boston Red Sox, who defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers in the last World Series. As a member of the organization, Buchheit gets a ring and has rings from the club’s World Series wins in 2007 and 2013. He traveled with the team, staffed its games home and away, worked long hours in the training room, on the field and in the dugout, from pre-spring training until the last out.

“You build friendships with these guys,” he said. “You’re with them during the seven weeks of spring training, all through the season and then for a month of postseason games. You’re with them more than your family.”

Family. It’s a primary reason Buchheit entered the world of athletic training. He recalled being at home as his father fought cancer.

“I was going to go into physical therapy as an undergrad (at Buena Vista University) as my dad had cancer and was disabled at home,” he said. “We had physical therapists come into our home and work with him. And since my mom was a nurse, she’d work with him and I would help, too.”

The family was also big into sports. Older brother Dave Buchheit played for Heelan and went on to pitch at Morningside College. Paul, who wasn’t as gifted athletically, toiled at the junior varsity level at Heelan for the bulk of high school.

“I played varsity baseball and football at Heelan,” he remembered. “During my time at Heelan,” Buchheit says, “I realized that while I wasn’t the best student or athlete if I worked hard enough, trusted God’s plan for me and was patient, opportunities would eventually come along that I’d be ready to take on. And I’ve carried that with me along my path to my career in Professional Baseball.”

I wasn’t big or strong; I worked to contribute in any way I could.”

As a senior, Buchheit’s best chance came on the mound and he recalls his most memorable Heelan game, a substate Crusader triumph over the Storm Lake Tornadoes in which the right-hander pitched for a team coached by Chris Bork, who noted Buchheit remains one of his favorites.

Bork, Malsam and Burchard all played roles as his prep days advanced, helping him to understand concepts like commitment and being a team-first teammate.

Buchheit was staffing a volleyball practice one afternoon when Todden, then the professor of athletic training at BVU, approached and asked if he wanted to work for the Boston Red Sox. …He landed the position with the parent club’s minor league team in Sarasota, Fla. A second internship followed … and he earned a master’s degree in athletic training at the University of Northern Iowa.

The Red Sox hired him full-time in October 2006 and he worked his way through every level of minor league baseball, earning a promotion to Boston in October 2015.

It’s a dream job, blending therapy, training and baseball. Buchheit is often at Fenway Park seven hours before the opening pitch, coordinating plans with fellow medical staff members as players file in, some doing post-surgical rehab with others focusing on pre-game preparation.

He’s in the dugout during games, talking to players between innings, examining arms, sharing tips on hydration, making trips to the mound, at times, and getting some TV time.

There are times when joy and laughter turn into sudden sadness. The warm glow of memories and friendship shock the heart with a gut punch of loss. Such was the case in June with the Heelan ’75 state championship football players.

Tony Audino ’76 who played on the ’75 state team hosted a football reunion at his Montana ranch May 15-19 for his Heelan ’75 state football championship teammates and coaches Dave Triplet and Phil Karpuk. At the reunion, the group paid tribute to the teammates who died too young. Then two weeks later another one died suddenly on June 2, John Pavlovich ’76.

“Pav” was a well-known and successful sports photographer and cameraman for CBS Sports and others. He had covered countless NFL games, Super Bowls, NBA Championships and Olympic games and was looking forward to Japan for the next Olympics.

So it was that the sudden and unexpected death of “Pav” ignited an idea – create a fund for a “Spirit of ’75 Championship” Scholarship for deserving students at Heelan to promote the strength and heart of players who made history.

It will mean the team members of yesterday are leaving a legacy to benefit student athletes of tomorrow.

Here is a Q and A with Audino ’76 and teammate John Harty ’77 about the Crusaders that won the state championship. Harty later played for Iowa and the San Francisco 49ers which won two Super Bowls when he was on the team.

Q: How did your team gel?
Audino: “For our team we had a new coach. Beanie Cooper was the head coach the prior year and had started that whole thing with PRIDE. He left for USD. We had this 25-year-old kid coming in as the new head coach – Dave Triplet from Davenport Assumption. We only had two returning starters and some were calling it a rebuilding year. Coach Triplet challenged us. He led every drill and he was with us the whole time. We weren’t the biggest and most talented. We just played really well as a team. We liked each other and hung out together.”

Harty: “The most fun at any level that I played at was in high school. It was pure fun. Nothing was better. The experience in retrospect at Heelan and the things like PRIDE and what it stands for really served me well after that. I look back at that time with the people that I had the pleasure to play with and realize how special it was. I was blessed with being around some really excellent people. Our young coaches were top notch. Coaches have the ability to make such a profound impact on players. People don’t realize the impact they can have.”
Audino: “We lost our first game to Dowling in a close battle. They had a team for the ages and rolled over everyone, and we lost just 22-15. But our confidence grew each week to the state championship.

Harty: “Winning is a whole lot more fun and winning a championship is what it’s all about. The final score of our game against Waterloo was 17-6. At Iowa I played against Dowling guys later who played for Iowa State and it was like Heelan-Dowling all over again.”

Q: Share some special memories
Audino: “At the reunion we shared this one story about Pav. My junior year we did have an incredible team, much more talented. We go down to Carroll Kuemper and on the bus ride down we’re talking about how soon into the game the second team will get to play. We got beat by Kuemper 7-6. Next year Kuemper is going to play us at home. Coach Triplett needed to make a statement early and huddled up Pav #10 and Dan Robinette #43. The play was masterfully drawn up whereby Pav would check in as the tailback. As the ball was flipped to Pav, he looked first at “Ingy” and he was hung up on the line trying to fight his way into the secondary. Pav checked left and saw #43 streaking down the sideline open. Pav stopped, planted and threw a 64-yard bomb for a 7-0 lead, a lead we would never relinquish! We poured it on them. We started out fast and never took our foot off the accelerator. It was a magical moment. John didn’t you intercept at another game and go in for a touchdown?”

Harty: “Yeah, we were playing Dowling and a player blocked the tip of the punt and it landed in my hands. There was a stunned pause like ‘What do I do now?’ Everybody started pointing and yelling ‘GO!’ I remember both sides of Memorial Field were packed and people were standing.”

Audino: (Laughing) “John at 6’6’ and 205 lbs -- a defensive linemen intercepting and running into the end zone. It was a classic moment!”

Q: Talk about your Montana Reunion
Audino: “I stayed connected to three or four guys over the years. About 18 months ago we started talking about a reunion and started tracking people down for May 15-19. We played in a golf outing and watched game highlights. Coach Triplett had sent me an old Heelan helmet. We mounted it and called it the PRIDE award, and gave it to Al Jones. It was part of our team spirit. We really believed in what PRIDE stood for.

We did one thing that was pretty memorable -- a tribute to the fallen Crusaders with sky lanterns that look like small hot air balloons. We also lit them for Coach Cooper, Fr. Elbert and the fans who have passed. What’s amazing is when you get together for several days it’s like you’re transported back 43 years. You really rekindle those relationships. To have Coach Triplett and Karpuk show up it just speaks to the comradery we built. They were fully engaged. It was super special.

Q: Why Establish a Scholarship?
Audino: “We didn’t do anything when Russ Wiltgen, Mike Courey or Gerry Marron passed. It was the proximity of the reunion to Pav’s death that jolted us. He died just two weeks after the reunion. We realized we needed to do something to pay tribute to the past and everybody agreed. Heelan was a big part of our lives shaping us as people not just athletes. My wife, Michelle, and I are both very involved in Catholic education in Seattle and really believe in the importance of a Catholic education today. It forms people with strong values and encourages us to be in service others.

Pav Story No. 1
Tony Audino
“Pav was the consummate teammate. Because he worked for CBS Sports and Sunday football games, he would reach out to many of us. Leo Berger, Kelly Florke, Mark Wurth all of us have been to different NFL games. I went to the Seattle Seahawks when they played the Colts. I was on the sidelines with the players and went to the pre-game. It was amazing that he took the time to connect with teammates and invite them.”

Pav Story No. 2
Leo Berger
Several of us have had the opportunity to be invited by Pav to work an NFL game and my opportunity was back in 2011 at Lambeau Field with the reigning Super Bowl champion Packers and Broncos squaring off. What a thrill for a lifelong Packer fan who had never been to Lambeau.

Sunday was a fabulous sunny October day in the mid 60’s. As the national anthem approached Pav tells me we’re gonna head down to catch the Packers coming out of the locker room and I then realize that a tunnel is being formed by the 1961 world champion Green Bay Packers who were holding their 50-year reunion.

As I’m holding Pav’s cables and listening to his instructions that the fighter jets will be doing a flyover the stadium at the end of the national anthem I realize I’m standing on the 10 yd line next to Willie Davis DE #89. Not wanting to screw up and end up on national TV I stayed focused on my job but did comment to Willie what a beautiful day it was, and he agreed.

I looked around to see Jim Taylor, Paul Hornung, Forrest Greg, Fuzzy Thurston, Bart Starr and others. As the jets buzz the stadium, here comes the Packers and I’m thinking ‘What am I doing here!?’. The Packers rolled to a 49-23 victory so there was lots of action and we were constantly on the move, including capturing several Lambeau leaps up close and personal! It was quite apparent during the course of that weekend what a professional Pav was and how well respected he is by members of the camera crew.

Pav Story No. 3
Kelly Florke
“I had a similar experience with Pav in Denver where the Bronco’s and Peyton Manning’s Colts squared off. The day prior to the game was very cool meeting with the CBS crew, dinner and hanging out. Game day was a “once in a lifetime” experience. Pav included me in the on-field “pre-game” set up, brunch with Jim Nance and Phil Sims, tour of the CBS production center, and time to accompany Nance and Sims up to the booth.

The entire game was spent with Pav on the field, post-game interviews with top players, then back under the stadium to hang out with Bronco players and their families, and finally under the ropes surrounding the Colts buses where John made it his business to introduce me to Peyton Manning as he was headed for the bus. Pinching myself the entire way.

My most memorable moment that day was when the Colts were driving down the field, 2nd and about 15 from the Bronco’s 30 yard line. Pav says to me to ‘grab the stuff, we are headed for the end zone. I’ve seen this down and distance before. Peyton likes to throw a fade to the end zone cone to Reggie Wayne.’

Pav wanted to be in position to get the perfect shot for the network. We positioned ourselves at the end zone cone, Pav with his camera hoisted and in the ready. Sure enough, as if Pav had called the play as the Offensive Coordinator from the booth, Reggie sprints to the 15, gives a little hesitation step (defensive back bites), and Reggie sails to the cone to catch a perfect spiral from Peyton, two quick steps before the end line, and puts 6 on the board. Pav, not entirely done yet, springs up and follows Reggie to the stadium wall, and as Reggie jumps 6 feet into the crowd, Pav captures all the action that no doubt is replayed 10x on a highlight reel.

I’m sure Pav considered that ‘all in a day’s work,’ but it was 100% exciting for a kid from Sioux City. Pav truly cared about creating this experience for me and others from our Heelan football team.”
The 1975 Championship Game

Here is how the Heelan Yearbook described the 1975 state contest at Kinnick Stadium.

“It was a long trip to Iowa City, but one that Heelan fans, players and coaches will never forget. Down 3-0 early in the game, the Crusaders came back with an 11 play drive as Gerry Marron smashed his way over from the one…. The half ended 7-6 as Waterloo got a field goal with just one second remaining. The second half was all Crusaders! Al Jones superb punting kept the Wahawks deep in their own territory the whole second half. Al boomed a 54-yarder to the Waterloo three, where a safety occurred there two plays later. Quarterback Mike Courey sewed up the state championship with a one-yard dive late in the game. Craig O’Connor led the balanced rushing with 54 yards and Gerry Marron and Tom Pylelo picked up 44 and 41 yards respectively. It was all an unbelievable uphill climb for Dave Triplett, his staff and the players after an opening loss to Dowling…On the Des Moines Register first team all state were Al Jones, and Tony Audino. Named second team Leo Berger and Kelly Florke. Mike Courey was cited for honorable mention.”

How Pav Got His Start in Sioux City

Pav learned to operate a camera from George Lindblade (Heelan grad) and Dave Gross at KCAU in Sioux City around the time when Heelan ’71 grads Ron Clements, Maria Vakulskas and Janet Thoman worked with Bill Turner, former Heelan parent, as station manager.

Pav worked in news and sports before working for WHO in Des Moines where he connected with newscaster Dave Nixon, another former Heelan parent.

Pav’s broadcast work with Pope John Paull II’s visit at Living History Farms fueled his passion as a videographer, Lindblade says. He headed to Sacramento and became a freelance photographer covering major sporting events in the U.S. and around the world for CBS and others.

Pav won Emmys for his work but never forgot his roots. He called Lindblade from all over the world and saw him during visits back in Sioux City. His brother, Dan, is a former Heelan teacher and wrestling coach. His mother resides at Holy Spirit Retirement Home.

Support the Spirit of ’75

All teammates, classmates and fans who cheered in the stands are invited to contribute to the endowed fund for a Spirit of ’75 Championship Scholarship. Starting next spring, an annual scholarship award will be presented to a qualified boy or girl athlete to help them with Heelan tuition. bishopheelan.org/Spiritof75
Linda (Murphy) Metz ’68 wishes she would have been able to afford a Catholic education for her four sons when she was raising them as a single mother in Sioux City.

So she is making it easier for single moms today with a new scholarship for single parents with the “Henry and Linda Metz Single Parent Scholarship.”

Linda learned her strong values and work ethic early from Blessed Sacrament School, Heelan and her parents Bill and Cleo Murphy. Her father was the chef at Joe Gantz Steak House and her mother was a waitress there.

“I loved Heelan and the friends I had there. A lot are still close to me,” Linda says. “In high school you’re at that formative age and there’s a bond. It’s a critical time when you’re a teen and you’re learning who you’re going to be!”

In 1984 after working for years as a stylist Linda bought Rick and Company Salon which quickly evolved into a day spa, the first in Sioux City. It was a time when a lot of mothers didn’t work outside the home, much less own and operate a business, manage employees, monitor inventory, grow customers and juggle four boys.

“Life was crazy but we had a lot of love in our house and an inordinate amount of faith,” Linda says. “We were happy.”

She is proud that today her sons own their own businesses.

When she was growing up it was important to her parents that all the Murphy kids have a Catholic education. It was a financial struggle for two parents then, and for Linda it became an impossibility as a single parent. All four of her boys had started at Blessed Sacrament and St. Michael’s, but she couldn’t keep paying tuition.

“When you are a single parent, meeting basic necessities can be a challenge and sometimes challenges make a decision for you. Catholic school tuition was not possible for me,” Linda says. “I’m not complaining. I loved being a mom. The best job I ever had was teaching my four boys to become men.”

Linda faced another challenge that changed her life. On Aug. 31, 2016 Linda’s son, Jeff, was critically injured in a motorcycle accident. “The amount of prayers and support from the class of ’68 was overwhelming,” she says. “A classmate in California, Henry Metz, privately messaged me and prayed for me through 12 days of intensive care and surgeries.”

The two rekindled their high school friendship, became phone friends, then lunch friends and then more. Linda and Henry were married Aug. 3, 2018.

“Henry truly has the kindest heart I have ever known,” Linda says. “We would not have the life we have now without the background, values and faith that was instilled by our Catholic education.”

Linda has never forgotten her Catholic faith, core values and the struggles of raising her sons alone. When she and Henry talked about doing something for Heelan, creating a single parent scholarship was a “no-brainer.” The new scholarship ensures that several teens will have extra help for their annual Heelan tuition for years to come.

After 34 years of ownership, Linda Metz sold “Hair by Rick” last fall and still works there occasionally. Two of her sons remain in Sioux City and two are in Omaha. The Henry and Linda together share 7 children and 15 grandchildren.
Mary T. Castle: In Memoriam

By Steve deGrasse ’73

Born just eight years after women first voted in the United States, deep in the handcuffs of Prohibition, and immediately prior to the Great Depression, Miss Castle earned a degree and launched a career when careers were hard to find...woman or man.

Eventually, she taught journalism at Heelan High School. I’m not sure how long. A long time. She influenced a lot of people. A lot of careers including mine. Most of us knew “Miss Castle” for short periods as we passed through Heelan.

My “short period” with her, a snapshot really, began sophomore year with a basic journalism class. Let’s say 1970. Miss Castle was different. She wasn’t a nun like many instructors at Heelan. She drove a car. She knew what was happening in the world. She had “expectations.” Which is why we read weekly the Christian Science Monitor...the most objective paper of the day. You remember...before the Internet. Before social media. When reporters were supposed to be objective.

I recall my folks’ first parent-teacher conference with Miss Castle. I had aced every test and expected an “A” that first quarter. When my Dad asked her why I hadn’t earned an “A,” she said, “Well, if I had given him an ‘A’, he wouldn’t have anything to shoot for, would he?” And that was the end of the conversation. She was, of course, correct. And I tried harder.

She lived nearly her entire life in an imposing house on Nebraska Street...kitty-corner from my Uncle Elmer Rizk’s dental practice.

She had friends. There was Louise...as in Louise Zerschling who reported for years for the Sioux City Journal. There were the women from school: Madeline (O’Shaunessy) and Mary Margaret (Keane). Certainly, there were others.

And at the beginning of what is known today as “the women’s movement”, we relished calling her “Ms. Castle”...as in “Mizzzzz Castle.”

She loved her car. One day she showed up at school in a shiny, new, four-door, baby blue, Oldsmobile Cutlass. As long as Memorial Field. She’d glide it meticulously backwards each day into her assigned parking spot perpendicular to the CYO.

She didn’t get bent about the small stuff. Three years later, when I was Editor-in-Chief of the SHIELD yearbook, there were always excuses for the “staff” to go to the post office, visit the Journal...any excuse to leave school early or to skip class. Lest we abuse the privilege, several of us (okay...I) forged her lower-case mtc on countless hall passes. Until one day during our seventh period yearbook free-for-all, I asked Miss Castle to sign a hall pass to which she replied, “Why don’t one of you sign it; you’ve all become so proficient at it!” We choked and snorted uncontrollable laughter. She’d known all along.

Importantly to me, she knew or sensed I couldn’t be a scientist, or a lawyer, or a doctor. But she knew I could write. And I did. For advertising. In Europe. Global communications. In Silicon Valley. For technology and life science leaders. Because I could. She had taught me how. It opened a lot of doors that wouldn’t have otherwise opened.

So, it’s ironic Miss Castle would leave this earth without an obituary. Fact is, she didn’t want one. So, this isn’t an obituary; just my personal recollection of why she meant so much to so many of us.

Thank you, Miss Castle.

Next year it will be 30 years that the Richardson sisters, Heelan grads, have teamed up to teach space camp to kids in Sioux City and Pawleys Island, S.C. Over the years some 3,800 elementary age students have taken the classes. Connie (Richardson) Smith, ’69 and her sister Mary (Richardson) Tester ’81 have spent every summer for the past 29 years teaching aerospace education to kids in grades 3-8 in the two communities. They’ve launched rockets, brought in special speakers and helped eager hands create space cities with foil-covered cones, boxes and towers.

“We want to engage children in the space program to, cultivate a passion for science that will lead to more science and space-related careers,” Smith says. “We work to ignite their imaginations and show how aerospace education and studies have improved our quality of life.”

We always emphasize what NASA has done for us on earth, Tester adds. “There have been more than 30,000 spinoffs of the space program,” she says. “Our satellites, cellphones, echocardiography, heart monitors, tennis shoe material and Mylar packaging are all examples of products we have today because of applications of space technology.”

Smith has a master’s in learning disabilities while Tester has a degree in special education. When a program at the University of Iowa inspired Smith she applied and was selected to be one of 19 teachers in the U.S. to study space exploration at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. She brought in her sister and has taught kids in Iowa and South Carolina ever since.

“What was awesome is that I would teach special ed during the school year, and in addition to some of my students, I also had totally different types of students in the summer,” Tester says. The teaching sisters say working together every summer has been a gift.

“We arranged it so Mary and her children would come to Sioux City in June to visit our parents (the late Ivan and Elaine Richardson) and I would go with my boys to Pawleys Island with its beautiful beaches in July,” Smith says. “It’s been both rewarding and fun.”

Any astronauts yet?

“I’ve had students who have become pilots, engineers and architects,” Smith adds. “If I could inspire just one student to become an astronaut I would accomplish my mission!”

Connie and Macdonald Smith ’66 are parents of Heelan grads Adam and Jay Smith. Adam is a therapist with a psychological and therapy services practice in Sioux City and Jay is a labor law attorney in West Des Moines.
Donors Chip in $373,000 in Heelan Auction

“Heelan Masters,” our 2019 Heelan Auction, raised over $373,000 for the Heelan School System, thanks to the Heelan family members who attended and bid on gifts from afar.

The tally for the April 6 event at the Sioux City Convention Center came in well above the fundraising goal of $360,000.

The evening hit a high note when a lively Heads or Tails game to win a vacation home-for-a-week in Mexico turned into a Live Auction gift and tickets to a Notre Dame vs Navy game launched a bidding war.

The evening included putting for gift cards and wine, vacation homes and a “Wildcat Willie” catamaran trip in the British Virgin Islands.

“Guests loved wearing casual golf attire and everyone had a great time,” said Nick Hegarty ’96, an auction chair with his wife, Amber ’94 who organized the putting for wine game.

Celebrating its 40th year, the Heelan Auction was first started in 1979 as the Friends of Heelan Ball and expanded when Catholic Schools united under the Heelan name.

“The decor, gifts and donor support make the Heelan Auction the premier fundraiser in our area,” says John Flanery, BHCS president.

Help us Update our Heelan Alumni Directory

Heelan alumni by now may have received a postcard or a call from PCI Publishing which prints alumni directories for schools across the country. We have info in our database, but alumni often forget to update us on address changes and wonder why they no long receive Crusader Connections or class reunion invites.

While Facebook can keep grads connected, many alums are not on Facebook or ignore messaging; hence the directory still has value. If you received a postcard or email and did not respond you will receive more. Yes when you call you will receive a sales pitch to purchase the directory (the person is a rep of PCI not a Heelan employee;) but you are under no obligation to buy anything. Thank you for helping us update Heelan’s Alumni Directory. Questions? Call Sue Ferris at 712-226-0366.

Parent Ambassadors Reach Out

Over two dozen sets of parents, including a number of Heelan alumni, are serving as Parent Ambassadors for our schools this year. The program – to help new parents feel supported and comfortable in the Bishop Heelan School System – started out with a picnic with these ambassadors and new families.

Parent ambassadors are partnered with families to touch base, answer questions or bring the family up to speed on any upcoming events. Fun events will be held during the year to connect families, according to Jenny Pattee, enrollment director.

“Ambassador outreach is an important way to support new and nearly new families, since students come to our Sioux City Catholic schools from different faiths, 22 communities and diverse backgrounds,” says Pattee. “By helping new families feel comfortable and welcome, we can better promote our amazing schools and all that BHCS has to offer.”
